Writing and Reading to Survive: Biblical and Contemporary Trauma Narratives in Conversation

L. Juliana M. Claassens (2020)

Writing and Reading to Survive brings a number of trauma narratives from the Hebrew Bible into conversation with contemporary trauma narratives, exploring how these ancient and modern-day stories mitigate the experiences of pain and suffering in the face of trauma.

The Bible on Violence: A Thick Description

Helen Paynter and Michael Spalione (eds.) (2020)

Launching our interdisciplinary biblical studies series, with contributions from both emerging and established academics, and scholars from several different belief traditions and none, this volume both offers and models a 'thick description' of biblical violence.

Samson and Delilah: Selected Essays

J. Cheryl Exum (2020)

Samson and Delilah. Well-known biblical figures in a tale of deception, betrayal and a haircut. Or is there more to the tale than this?

There is, in fact, a good deal more, as J. Cheryl Exum demonstrates in this wide-ranging collection of essays. Far from being a simple story, the tale in Judges 13–16 about Samson and his adventures, culminating in his fatal liaison with Delilah, is a subtle, nuanced and highly complex narrative with an elaborate literary structure, a sophisticated theological programme, and an ambitious and problematic androcentric agenda.

An Encomium for Jesus

Jerome H. Neyrey (2020)

Luke's narrative about Jesus followed the conventions for ancient biography. An Encomium for Jesus argues that Luke mastered the genre, its conventional topics, and specific instructions for composing one.

Echoes of Lament and the Christology of Luke

Channing L. Crisler (2020)

Crisler suggests that the interplay between the laments crafted by Luke and laments from Israel's Scriptures produce highly suggestive Christological points of resonance.

A Star from Jacob, a Sceptre from Israel: Balaam's Oracle as Rewritten Scripture in the Dead Sea Scrolls

Libor Marek (2020)

The fourth Balaam oracle (Numbers 24.17-19) appears in four separate Dead Sea Scrolls. But how it is used and understood remains puzzling and challenging. Marek's monograph enables the reader to gain a better understanding of the world of Qumran, of the communication strategy of the Scrolls, and of some of their key theological concepts.

Spirit and Story: Pentecostal Readings of Scripture: Essays in Honour of John Christopher Thomas

Blaine Charette and Robby Waddell (eds.) (2020)

This collection of essays brings together an international group of biblical scholars, theologians, and historians who are committed to readings of biblical texts that are sensitive to the work of the Spirit. Perhaps no one has contributed more in recent decades to the description and promotion of Pentecostal Theology than Chris Thomas, and this volume serves as a loving and respectful tribute to his commitment and achievement.

The Edict of Cyrus and Notions of Restoration in Ezra–Nehemiah and Chronicles

Andrew M. Gilhooley (2020)

The Edict of Cyrus, both opening Ezra–Nehemiah (Ezra 1:1-4) and closing Chronicles (2 Chron. 36:22-23), serves a different role in each book. In Ezra–Nehemiah, it is a command resulting in a restoration event that has failed, whereas in Chronicles it is a command anticipating a successful future restoration event. In the context of canon, these different uses of the edict are theologically significant.

Reading the Magnificat in Australia: Unsettling Engagements

Anne Elvey (2020)

Reading the Magnificat as a song of protest, Anne Elvey sketches a counter-colonial reading practice that in compassionate grief and hope is attentive to the ecological trauma of our time. The readings engage with creative responses to the Magnificat, from pious verse to abstract expressionist art, and include a number of the author's creative engagements in response.

Like the Stars Forever: Narrative and Theological Reflections in the Book of Daniel

Tim Meadowcroft

This anthology of Meadowcroft's essays has three distinctives: a close reading of the narrative art of the book of Daniel; viewing the faithful wise as expressive of the hopes placed in the temple; and a theological and contextual reading of the experiences of Daniel and his friends.

The Bible and Money: Economy and Socioeconomic Ethics in the Bible

Markus Zehnder and Hallvard Hagelia (eds.)

What does the Bible say about money? This volume presents the researches of 18 international biblical scholars at Ansgarskolen's Norwegian Summer Academy for Biblical Studies. This unusual volume is a useful resource for researchers, but also a coursebook to be used in the classroom and a comprehensive introduction to biblical economic ethics in general.

Job: From Lament to Penitence

Alexander W. Breitkopf

Using the methodological frameworks of form criticism and eco-anthropology—which studies how human identity is formed in relation with the natural world—, Breitkopf argues that the voice of the character Job undergoes a marked shift from lament to penitence as the book proceeds. It corresponds to a shift in the character's worldview, evinced in the book's language about the natural order.

Performing Masculinity in the Hebrew Bible

Milena Kirova

Among the intriguing questions Kirova poses in Performing Masculinity are these: Why should heroes be beautiful? What is the benefit of weeping, and weeping eloquently? Why problematize what is 'natural'? Who is the 'bramble king'? The ten chapters of Performing Masculinity are deliberately interdisciplinary: anthropology, psychoanalysis, literary and gender studies complement biblical criticism. A variety of audiences will find the book a pleasure and an education.
